Censorship of art is big news, from Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano to the NEA Four and the Brooklyn Museum of Art "Sensation" show. This session of Tea & Ethics will offer an overview of art and censorship in order to raise questions about artistic integrity and freedom. Can an artist go too far? What does this mean? When does art become pornography? When is art too violent to be called art? Can something obscene be art? How does one define obscene? Should art that is critical of our government be censored? Who decides what art gets to be seen and where?
