TEA & ETHICS

Cut Down the Pine Forest – Build a Mall:

What's the Problem ?

Please join us for tea and cookies while Sociology professor Dr. Chris Podeschi and Economics professor Dr. Yoav Wachsman discuss the dynamics of economic growth and its environmental consequences. Are environmental problems that come with growth simply the product of individual decisions in the free market, and thus an ethical problem? Or rather, does economic growth need to be understood in terms of social structure, specifically, the way our economy operates, both at the local and broader levels? Does the environment have intrinsic value, and if it does, how can this value be preserved in a capitalistic system?
