TEA AND ETHICS

Gazing on the Face of the “Other”: The Ethics of Compassion in the Global Village

Each day the media present a smorgasbord of headlines suggesting the “Other” as our enemy. Our world is littered with the results of the seeming endless cycle of conflicts (political, ideological, ethnic, religious, etc.) standing on the foundation of an “Us” and “Them” model of engagement. This model seems oblivious to the ever increasing interconnectedness of global socio-economic, ecological and political systems. The goal of this talk is to offer ways for rethinking “otherness,” and offer the ethics of compassion as the way for transforming global engagement in the twenty-first century.
