C.I.N.O. DAY

One of Coastal Carolina University’s main focuses is keeping the spirit of the campus and traditions alive and thriving. One of the most celebrated traditions for many years has been the annual C.I.N.O. (Coastal Is Number One) Day.

C.I.N.O. Day which is held on the last Friday of regular classes in the Spring semester is designed to be a stress reliever for the students. It’s fun-filled carnival like atmosphere is a free event open to all students, faculty, and staff. This year counts the 41st year of C.I.N.O Day on the Coastal campus.

Some of the past activities of C.I.N.O. Day have included mechanical bulls, rope and obstacles courses, t-shirt tie-dye stations, body art stations, carnival games and many other activities.

C.I.N.O. Day at Coastal is an activity filled day that the campus will continue to preserve for the sake of our teal and bronze traditions.

Phillip Phillips

The Office of Student Activities & Leadership (OSAL) hosted a Phillip Phillips concert on Wednesday, April 4. The Season 11 American Idol winner showcased his new album The World from the Side of the Moon. The concert was held in the HTC Student Recreation and Convocation Center on campus. Tyger Glauser, the Assistant Director of OSAL coordinated this amazing experience for CCU student and community members. Through her collaboration with campus departments such as Aramark Food Services, CCU Public Safety, the HTC staff, and the event planning staff, Tyger was able to create a unique experience for all in attendance. With almost 3,000 people in attendance it was a sold out show, a phenomenal way to showcase the HTC Center’s ability to host concerts.

The tickets for the concert were $10 for students in advance, $15 at the door, $15 for community members in advance, and $20 at the door.

Tyger and the rest of the OSAL office look forward to the opportunity to continue to host unique events like this for the CCU community.

Tempo 54

The Office of Multicultural Student Services hosted Tempo 54, a drumline showcase on Saturday March 23, 2013. The name Tempo 54 is a variation on the description of the event and the University’s founding date of 1954. The showcase featured drumlines from South Carolina State University, Winston Salem State University, as well as North Carolina A&T. The public event took place in the CCU’s HTC center.

Robert Harris served as the Multicultural Student Services’ student assistant in the direction of the event. Harris, along with the work of Maya Burney from C.A.B (Coastal Activities Board) and Kambrel Ward, Coordinator of Diversity Programs, coordinated the event from choosing the drumline bands all the way down to the production’s performance. The event had a grand turn out of about 2,200 students and community members. The Tempo 54 event managed to raise $1,200 in sponsorship funds. Not only did the performance consist of the talented drumlines but also a variety of music, dancing and free give-a-ways.
Coastal’s Volunteer Services launched their inaugural Peace Week for the school year. This year’s Peace Week occurred from April 15 - 20. All events were free and open to the CCU community and the general public.

The fundamental purpose of Peace Week was to promote global justice, equality and peace. Peace Week was also about giving students a chance to celebrate and appreciate diversity and the idea of community.

Peace Week was comprised of several events that catered to the purpose of the initiative. One of the first events that took place was Yoga in Blanton Park on April 15. The students took part in a collective exercise that targeted to foster and channel positive energy of the body. Blanton Park is one of the campus’ newly developed areas in front of the Singleton Building.

Another event of the week was A Day Without Shoes in respect to the TOMS Shoes humanitarian position of providing shoes for third world children in need. Students went barefoot around campus to raise awareness about the conditions of children who have to go barefoot on a daily basis.

Peace Week also involved the Great Day of Service on April 20 that lasted from 9 - 4p.m. This day of service included about 100 volunteers teamed up, went out, and served the Conway/Horry Country community with other community partners in the area.
