Kimbel Library works with faculty to provide streaming media for classroom use, both on and off campus. Kimbel Library purchases individual titles, availability and funding permitting, and also subscribes to multiple streaming video collections. Most videos in these collections have closed captions and/or transcripts and can be linked and embedded in Moodle.

Faculty looking for specific titles that Kimbel Library does not own are encouraged to work with their library liaison to locate or purchase the video. A search of the library catalog and streaming video collections will determine if the library already owns a copy of the video, either in DVD or streaming format. If money is available in your department’s collection development budget, those funds may be used to purchase the title. If streaming format is required, Kimbel Library will make every attempt to purchase the title. However, if Kimbel Library is unable to purchase the video, we recommend faculty direct students to alternative websites, such as YouTube or Netflix.
