

HTC Scholars Program

Funding for Honors Projects and Travel

The HTC Honors College offers students the opportunity to apply for funding to support their Honors experience, through the HTC Scholars program. The HTC Scholars program provides funding assistance for:

- Supplies for projects in Honors courses and/or Honors thesis/capstone projects
- Travel to conferences to present Honors research.
- Study Abroad Programs

Eligibility Requirements:

Students applying for funding should be in good standing in the Honors College. Students must meet the minimum GPA requirements and be on track to finish their required number of Honors credits by graduation. Students are eligible for support for travel to one conference per academic year.

Application Procedure:

Students interested in funding for Study Abroad programs should apply through the Center for Global Engagement, during the application process for a study abroad program.

For all other projects and/or travel, students should apply via the webform located on the Honors website. Students should prepare the following materials in Word or (preferably) PDF formats:

- A short proposal or description of the project and/or travel and how it relates to their Honors experience. If you are presenting at a conference, a copy of the abstract should be included. Larger requests will require, of course, more detail.
- A budget that details the cost of the project and what other sources of funding are available (i.e. if the department or college is splitting the expense). Budget requests can range from less than $50 for small projects to more than $500 for projects that impact more than one Honors student.
When requesting money for conference travel, a detailed breakdown of the proposed travel costs should be provided. Students must be accompanied to conferences by a faculty member.
- A short written note of support from the supervising faculty member.

The form will allow you to submit up to three documents.

Post-Award Report

After the project or travel, HTC Scholars are required to write a short reflective report about their experience and submit it to the Honors College office.
